From the President How Theological Education Can Form Leaders

Columbia University Libraries recently held its 11th annual symposium: "Leaders Everywhere: Fostering Leadership Across the Academic Library Organization." It was an engaging day with insights from Elliott Shore, Jerily Veldof, Courtney Young, and a panel of librarians who lead from the middle. I had the honor of facilitating the closing session, which was a reflective discussion on insights and takeaways from the day. I was asked to facilitate due, in part, to my involvement with ATLA. Prior to and during the event, several of my Columbia University Libraries colleagues joked that they looked forward to my "preaching" and "pastoring" at the end of the day. At the time, I wasn't quite sure how to take these comments, but I thought it would be a great opportunity to integrate the various talks of the day. However, at that time, I did not fully appreciate the need to take thoughtful notes throughout the entire day and to listen carefully to participants' discussions during lunch.

I started the closing session by reflecting on how a background in theological studies can be instrumental in the formation of leaders. I then outlined some of the ways that my education and experience had helped me to develop as a leader and decided that seven was a good stopping point. First, my background in biblical studies provided me with various models of leadership. There were central and peripheral prophets in ancient Israel, as there are now. There were also leaders with severe character flaws, as there are now. Many of these examples inspired me, albeit in very different ways. Second, my experience with clinical pastoral education taught me important lessons about emotional intelligence -- lessons that I use on a daily basis in my administrative work. Third, I was trained in the art of reflective practice. Sometimes to my own detriment, I constantly reflect on my actions and their impact, and I reflect on my surroundings and interactions with others. Fourth, seminary training and vocational discernment often creates a heightened level of self-awareness (via all those psychological tests) and an ability to see things from other perspectives (sometimes referred to as "reframing"). Fifth, theological education often includes integrative seminars whereby theory and praxis are brought into dialogue. Sixth, it

ATLA / EBSCO Publishing Consortium

ATLA is currently working with EBSCO Publishing on renewal and pricing for the ATLA / EBSCO Publishing Consortium. This program provides consortium pricing on several EBSCO Publishing databases via EBSCO*host*, including ATLA Religion Database®, ATLASerials®, ATLA Catholic Periodical and Literature Index®, Old Testament Abstracts (OTA) and New Testament Abstracts (NTA). Institutions that participated in the consortium in 2013-2014 would have received an e-mail in early April. If your institution did not participate in the past and you have questions about eligibility and participation, please contact Kelly Jurecko at kjurecko@atla.com.

ATLA / OCLC Consortium

ATLA is currently working with OCLC on renewal and pricing for the ATLA / OCLC Consortium. The ATLA / OCLC Consortium offers three different FirstSearch options for members. Institutions that participated in the consortium in 2013-2014 will receive in e-mail in mid-April. If your institution did not participate in the past and you have questions about eligibility and participation, please contact Kelly Jurecko at kjurecko@atla.com.

ATLA Annual Report 2012-2013 Available Online

The American Theological Library Association's (ATLA) 2012-2013 Annual Report is now available.

The report highlights the many accomplishments of the Association, including the work of Association's committees and improvements to ATLA's products.

A report from the independent auditing firm McGladrey LLP is also provided, offering an account of the Association's finances at the conclusion of fiscal year 2012-13.

ATLA to Consider Individual Dues Increase for January 2015 Ballot

Over the past several meetings, the ATLA Board of Directors has spent a significant amount of time discussing how we can sustain the services provided to our members. It should come as no surprise that our association benefits from the revenues derived from ATLA's suite of products. The member dues supplied by ATLA Institutional, Affiliate, Individual, and Student members provide just 15% of the total amount expended to provide the wide range of services throughout our Association. As members, we share in these mutual benefits, including our annual conference, with an affordable and often reduced registration, travel grants, and scholarships for members; a wide range of grants to libraries and individuals; and the work of committees and member initiatives, including our open access journal Theological Librarianship.

Even as the range of benefits has expanded, our individual member dues have remained unchanged. While institutional member dues were last raised in 2006, individual and student dues have not been raised for many years. In fact, the last time they were adjusted was in 1998 - and at that time they were actually decreased for a large segment of our members.

The Board of Directors is planning to put forth on our next electronic ballot (January 2015) a motion to raise dues for Individual and Student Members. Later this spring current members will receive a letter outlining the details of the increase. Over the next several months, the Board will engage the membership in a discussion of how we can sustain our Association. In addition to a web site with further information about this proposal, we will be talking about this at our 2014 Annual Conference, as well as at a web meeting and through a series of updates in our ATLA Newsletter. We are giving ourselves plenty of time to consider this proposal and we hope that this will be an active dialogue. We appreciate your attention to this issue and look forward to a dialogue about our Association's future. If you have any questions, please contact us.

Letter from the President Continued

has been helpful for me to have a theological vocabulary to draw on in times of celebration and crisis and during the moments in between. Finally, my training in research methods has helped me to define and solve problems, to identify and evaluate evidence, and to make decisions and reach conclusions. I could elaborate on each item in my list, and I am sure we could build a much longer list, but I will stop for now.

For many decades, we in ATLA have talked about what it means to be a theological librarian and to do theological librarianship. I hope this conversation continues that tradition. I also hope that I have contributed to it in some small way by asking us to reflect for a moment on how our educations and experiences impact our abilities to be leaders. How does your background enable you to lead from where you are?

Beth Bidlack President

Twelve Institutions Selected for The Future of Libraries in Theological Education Conversation

Twelve institutions have been selected to participate in The Future of Libraries in Theological Education: A Conversation with Chief Academic Officers, Information Technology Officers, and Library Directors. The program, sponsored by the American Theological Library Association (ATLA) and Association of Theological Schools in the United States and Canada (ATS) will be held as a one-day pre-conference event on Tuesday, June 24, 2014, ahead of the 2014 ATS/COA Biennial Meeting in Pittsburgh, PA.

"Theological education is changing and libraries must change, too," said Brenda Bailey-Hainer, ATLA Executive Director. "This conversation among three key leadership groups provides the opportunity to proactively shape future theological libraries and librarians in ways that will integrate them into the teaching, learning, and research processes of the academy."

The selected institutions are:

- Baptist Missionary Association Theological Seminary
- Chicago Theological Seminary
- Claremont School of Theology
- Columbia Theological Seminary
- Lancaster Theological Seminary
- Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary / Lenoir-Rhyne University

- Nazarene Theological Seminary
- Pittsburgh Theological Seminary
- Princeton Theological Seminary
- Shaw University Divinity School
- St. Charles Borromeo Seminary
- Wesley Theological Seminary

The conversation will be a first step toward understanding the roles of libraries and librarians in theological education as perceived by diverse stakeholders, including academic leaders, information technology officers, and librarians.

Participants will share their perceptions and create a shared vision for the future theological library - including its contribution to curriculum and to scholarly research - in the changing world of theological education. The results of the conversation will be reported out to a broader audience in a session held the following day during the COA Biennial Meeting as well as through official ATLA publication channels.

ATLA Accepting Applications for Scholarships to Promote Diversity in Theological Librarianship

ATLA is pleased to offer two scholarships to help promote diversity in Theological Librarianship.

Scholarship for a Theological Librarianship Course

The American Theological Library Association will provide one scholarship for $1,200 to a student from an underrepresented population to attend a Theological Librarianship course at any ALA-accredited master's program in library and information studies, including the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign's LEEP course, Theological Librarianship (LIS 590TL).

- Applicant must be from an underrepresented population (religious, racial, ethnic, or gender).
- Applicant must be an ATLA member in good standing.

ATLA Diversity Scholarship

The American Theological Library Association will provide one scholarship for $2,400 to a student from an underrepresented population enrolled in an ALA-accredited master's program in library and information studies.

- Applicant must be from an underrepresented population (religious, racial, ethnic, or gender).
- Applicant must be an ATLA member in good standing.
- Applicant must secure a letter of recommendation from the director of an ATLA Institutional Member library.
- Applicant must enroll and complete at least 6 credit hours in the 12 months following notification.

Applications for both scholarships must be received by May 1 of each year. Applicants will be notified of results by July 1.

Scholarship funds are supplied by generous ATLA members who donate to the Scholarships and Grants Annual Fund. For more information and to support this fund, please visit the ATLA Scholarships and Grants Annual Fund web page.

Special thanks to the ATLA Diversity Committee for their support of this scholarship program.

ATLA Publications Committee Awards Two Research / Publication Grants

The ATLA Publications Committee awarded two Research / Publication Grants to ATLA members.

Recipients and projects include:

- Melody Layton McMahon, Director of the Paul Bechtold Library, Catholic Theological Union, for her project, "Asian Catholic Seminary Libraries"
- Garrett Trott, Instruction-Reference Librarian, Corban University / Northwest Baptist Seminary, for his project, "Value in Theological Journals"

ATLA wishes to thank Publications Committee members Lisa Gonzalez (chair), Miranda Bennett, and Bradley Ost for their work in reviewing grant applications.

ATLA Research / Publication Grants aid in the development of a scholarly work that advances some aspect of theological librarianship. The purpose of Research / Publication Grants is to facilitate the creation and/or organization of scholarly resources and primary source materials in areas related to theological librarianship. Publications resulting from funded projects are expected to be disseminated through a channel of professional publication, such as a professional journal, a monograph, or a presentation with published proceedings.

Submit to Research in Ministry®

This graduation season, please invite your graduating DMin, DMiss, or DEdMin students to submit abstracts for their dissertations and other research projects to ATLA's Research in Ministry (RIM®) database.

Graduates in these programs from all ATS-accredited schools are invited to add their scholarship to this important resource in pastoral education.

To submit abstracts of DMin, DMiss, and DEdMin projects from any ATS-accredited school, please go to the RIM® Submission page.

Association of Christian Librarians (ACL) Host E-Publishing Forum with Publishers at 2014 ACL Annual Conference

The Association of Christian Librarians (ACL) annual conference, co-hosted by Grace College & Seminary and Huntington University, is being held at Huntington University, Huntington, Indiana, June 9 - 13, 2014. On Wednesday, June 11, ACL has invited a panel of Evangelical publishers to express librarians' need for quality e-resources, and to listen to their difficulties related to e-publishing. ACL would like to determine what we can do to encourage the publishers to distribute more of their academic publications as e-books, and to allow for more access to these materials. The Association and hosting team would like to invite ATLA members to join ACL on Wednesday to demonstrate the growing need for access both of our associations have for quality e-resources.

If you are interested in attending ACL's meeting please visit the conference website Crossroads for Discovery and check out the information for the entire week. If you wish to participate in Wednesday only, single day registration includes meetings and presentations, lunch and breaks for ONE DAY ONLY; cost is $60 per day. Registration for the conference closes on May 10th.

Registration open for 4th Annual International Conference on Information and Religion

Registration is now open for the 2014 Conference on Information and Religion, hosted by the Center for the Study of Information and Religion in the School of Library and Information Science at Kent State University.

This year's theme is Information Management in Religious Organizations, and our keynote speaker is Dr. Kenneth Inskeep, Director, Research and Evaluation, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and co-author of Chasing Down a Rumor: The Death of Mainline Denominations.

The conference is scheduled for June 5 and 6, 2014, at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio.

For details, including a list of presentations and a link to registration, visit our website.

From the Executive Director Assuring the Future of Theological Librarianship

Every nonprofit organization strives to maintain a level of financial stability that will enable it to achieve its mission. In the case of associations in particular, this stability can be achieved through revenue from a combination of four primary sources: 1) membership dues, 2) earned income from the sale of products or services, 3) grants for specific projects, and 4) an endowment that generates income.

Over the last three years, ATLA has been gradually strengthening its financial position. At various times in the past, it relied on grants to fund on-going operations. Now, operations are fully self-funded through the revenue derived from ATLA products; grants are used only for special projects. Members are asked to share the cost of some programs through conference registration fees or fees for professional development programs, which only partially cover the overall cost of the events.

But it is critical that an organization not rely too heavily on any one of the four primary revenue sources. Currently ATLA is vulnerable due to the large proportion of revenue that comes from products and must endeavor to increase the other three revenue streams for a more balanced approach.

Work has already begun to build grant revenue. Last September, ATLA received its first ever IMLS grant to assess the preservation needs of small religious studies libraries and collections. The results of this planning grant will be used to justify a grant proposal for a full blown preservation project later this year.

ATLA's Board of Directors has been discussing a potential membership dues increase for individuals, which would be on the January 2015 electronic ballot. This would be the first dues increase for individuals in decades.

But a much needed fourth pillar of financial sustainability is missing from our portfolio: a robust endowment that generates income. As of the end of March, the value of ATLA's Endowment Fund was $378,000. While it has significantly increased in value in the last three years, this amount does not generate enough income to support even a small portion of the association's programs.

At last year's ATLA Annual Conference, the Endowment Committee set a short term goal of increasing the Fund to $1 million. To help reach this goal, all income from the Fund is being reinvested in it.

In addition, ATLA will be matching, dollar for dollar, all donations made between June 1, 2013, and May 31, 2014, up to a total amount of $10,000. As of early April, over $6,500 in donations has been received. ATLA has matched this amount, leaving roughly $3,500 still available in matching funds.

Generating revenue is not an end in itself, but rather it is necessary to fund the mission of the organization. As your professional association, ATLA coordinates collaborative efforts to gain results that would be impossible for theological libraries to achieve on their own. Whether it is proactively framing the discussion about the future role of theological libraries and librarians in theological education, ensuring that important resources in religious studies are preserved for future scholars, or negotiating group licenses to help reduce costs to individual libraries, ATLA uses its revenue to better theological libraries and librarianship.

Please join me in making a donation to ATLA's Endowment Fund before May 31 to help make this a record year of contributions. It will help assure the fulfillment of ATLA's mission of enhancing the development of theological and religious studies libraries and librarians, both now and into the future.

Brenda Bailey-Hainer Executive Director
